

QUESTION 26 OF 52: NOT ANSWERED

The author of Passage 2 refers to the novel War and Peace primarily to suggest that Woody Allen

A did not like Tolstoy's writing style.

Woody Allen's description of War and Peace does not suggest he disliked Tolstoy's writing style.

B could not comprehend the novel by speed-reading it.

The author of Passage 2 explains how speed-reading does not "revamp," or alter, how the brain processes information. He supports this statement by explaining how Woody Allen's reading of War and Peace in one sitting caused him to describe the novel as "about Russia." Woody Allen was not able to comprehend the "famously long" novel by speed-reading it.

C had become quite skilled at multitasking.

The anecdote about Woody Allen is unrelated to multitasking.

D regretted having read such a long novel.

Woody Allen's description of War and Peace does not suggest he regretted reading the book.
