

QUESTION 4 OF 44: NOT ANSWERED

At this point, the writer is considering adding the following information.

—e-books, audio and video materials, and online journals—

Should the writer make this addition here?

- A Yes, because it provides specific examples of the materials discussed in the sentence.

It states accurately why the proposed clause should be added to the sentence. Without these specific examples, readers have only a vague sense of what "nonprint" formats might be.

- B Yes, because it illustrates the reason for the increase mentioned later in the sentence.

It represents a misinterpretation of the relationship between the proposed clause to be added and the surrounding text in the passage.

- C No, because it interrupts the flow of the sentence by supplying irrelevant information.

It represents a misinterpretation of the relationship between the proposed clause to be added and the surrounding text in the passage.

- D No, because it weakens the focus of the passage by discussing a subject other than librarians.

It represents a misinterpretation of the relationship between the proposed clause to be added and the surrounding text in the passage.
